"I Am Head of the Family."

Sir John Swinburne tells with much gusto how, whenever he is introduced to anyone, he is asked: "Are you related to the poet Algernon Swin-burne?" to which he invariably replies, "Bless your soul I am head of the Swinburne family, and he is re-lated to me." Sir John has just here happily bit off the relationship of Westmoreland's Calisaya Tonic. It is the head of the family; it ranks first, and the superlative merits of a tonic are embodied in it. It is pre-eminently the favorite with practising physicians and they generously prescribe it. The formula combines the powerful virtues of the Calisaya or Cinchona bark and other valuable tonics and alteratives. For indigestion, general debility, dyspepsia, torpid liver, impure blood or malarial poisoning, is an invaluable remedy. For sale by Robertson &

He is now thirty-six years of fogy teachers as the writer. We have recently felt more interest in the new methods of teaching than we once thought we could. Why is it? Because the new methods are the best and we believe that the teachers who try them will agree with us.

It is surely the duty of the teacher to prove all things, and lay hold of that which will impart the most and the best in the least time. The new system of teaching reading is certainly an improvement, and we do wish that all teachers would treat it with respect enough to try it. If we expect to hold our positions as teachers, we must lay aside prejudices and falling into line march on. We cannot afford to be obstinate or we will simply be told that we are out of date and that there is another better qualified to take our But some will say, I have not the time, or the proper pupils. or -Away with excuses. In every recog nized school there are at least six small children. If they know the alphabet and can even read a little this does not differ. Give them a class recitation in sounds each day, just as if they had never seen a letter. You will be awk-ward at first, but "perseverence will conquer," and the ignorant must learn before they can communicate. A chart like Miss Garlington's would be desirable, but not many of us can have it. Our chance is to print the words on the board. This, too, is difficult; but with a little practice your letters will soon be legible. The children enjoy the lesson greatly, and it will break the monotony for you.

We are sure that in primary teaching

we have laid too much stress on spelling, and we have paid the penalty. How we have labored to teach children the letters, never being able to think what vague instruments their names were for building words. When we first considered phonetic reading we saw it only "through a glass darkly," but now we prefer it to "the good old Another reason for our teaching phonetic reading is that some of our pupils will one day be teachers, and it is our duty to thoroughly equip them for their work. It is in the common schools that we must prepare teachers for the common schools. Remember, our pu pils will reflect our light. Without every ray is given we cannot reflect the pure white. Let us, then, be up and effects, prepared only from the most is it because they do not feel interested in their work? Why don't they attend our school conventions? If they would many excellent qualities commend it come a few times, they would become to all and have made it the most interested. Try it. Surely in your schools you have a patron kind enough to furnish a way and a youth gallant enough to drive you to town. This one thing you can do; you can test the matter and if you cannot succeed you will certainly be excused.
